

Dear FCC,

Any revisions to the regulations which prohibit media companys from owning both a newspaper and TV station within the same geographic area is inadvisable. A free and diversified press is part of the foundation of the USA's legacy of freedom and democracy. What is needed are more independent print publications, which provide the public reportage which is both unbiased and unrestrained by larger corporate profit motives, which seek to reduce operational costs to increase surplus revenues. Dual ownership of both print and broadcast mediums is not a model which will provide indepth, independent research and effective informational jounalistic practices which would inform and educate the reader/viewership within this country. Reject changes to allow media companys to own both print and television producers within the same geographic areas and protect the American public's right and need to be informed and served by separately owned media corporations. Strength through diversity.

Thank you,

William M. Popper
